

Are you protected against measles?

Measles is a highly contagious disease but the vaccine can prevent serious illness. Contact your local immunization provider to check your own or your child's immunization records. You can also check medical records through the BC Health Gateway online: healthgateway.gov.bc.ca

Find more information at:

HealthLinkBC: healthlinkbc.ca/healthlinkbc-files/measles or call 8-1-1

The measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR) vaccine is a two dose series routinely given starting at 12 months. If you're planning on travelling with young children, or in an area where people have measles, talk to your immunization provider about getting a dose before this age.

First Nations Health Authority
Health through wellness